Dr. Richard J. Harknett
Professor and Head of the Department of Political Science, University of Cincinnati

Dr. Richard J. Harknett is Professor and Head of the Department of Political Science at the University of Cincinnati (UC). He is the author of over fifty publications in the area of international relations theory and international security studies. In 2017, he served as the inaugural US-UK Fulbright Scholar in Cybersecurity, University of Oxford, United Kingdom and in 2016 as the first scholar-in-residence at US Cyber Command and National Security Agency, where he continues to advise. He provides analysis to government agencies, including the US Defense and State Departments, US Senate testimony, and to US Congressional members and staffs as well as to US allies. He served as the Ohio Governor's appointee on the State of Ohio's Cybersecurity, Education, and Economic Development Council while contributing to the writing of Ohio's Cybersecurity Strategy and currently co-leads the Ohio Cyber Range project. He has provided invited lectures throughout the US and ten countries.

He was selected in 2001 as Fulbright Professor of International Relations at the Diplomatic Academy, Vienna, Austria where he continues to hold a professorial lectureship. Prof. Harknett has been named the Boyd-Lubker Visiting Scholar at Western Kentucky University, the Edith C. Alexander Distinguished Teaching Professor and the Distinguished Service Professor in McMicken College, UC, the Faculty Awardee for Exemplary Contributions in Service to the University, UC, and was the recipient of the State of Ohio Faculty Innovator award. He has served as Chair of the University Faculty and Chair of the Charles Phelps Taft Research Center at UC. He earned his PhD from The Johns Hopkins University and BA from Villanova University. He is an avid fan of Liverpool F.C.